

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. editions of Kraft's work, which, in its present form, is the most copious of all the German-Latin Dictionaries, consisting of two very thick octavo volumes, which contain respectively 1426 and 1509 pages. Though we have occasionally consulted Kraft with benefit, we are decidedly of opinion that Georges is considerably superior to him in clearness of arrangement, and in the combination of sufficient fulness with a sound principle of selection; nor do we hesitate to give the preference to Georges even on the ground of scrupulous accuracy, though the occasional instances of inaccuracy that we have detected in Kraft are very rare exceptions to the general character of his work. Dr. Mühlmann, who published a German-Latin Dictionary in 1845, is almost entirely dependent upon Georges.

With respect to other helps, the 'Anti-barbarus' of Krebs, Döderlein's 'Synonymical Hand-book,' and Freund's 'Wörterbuch der Lateinischen Sprache,' have been our constant companions. We have also derived considerable assistance from Bonnell's 'Lexicon Quintilianum;' and have often consulted with advantage Haase's notes to Reisig's 'Vorlesungen,' Hand's 'Tursellinus,' and Krüger's 'Grammatik der Lateinischen Sprache.' Amongst other works, of which we have occasionally made use, we may mention Billerbeck's 'Flora Classica,' Kraus's 'Medicinisches Lexicon,' Ernesti's 'Lexicon Technologiæ Latinorum Rhetoricæ,' with Crusius's 'Vollständiges Wörterbuch' to Cæsar, and Billerbeck's to Cornelius Nepos.

About 150 pages of the work were printed off before either of us became aware that the other was engaged in the same task, and was drawing his materials from the same sources. For that portion of the work Mr. Arnold alone is answerable. When a joint publication was resolved upon, the portion (A—C), which Mr. Riddle had but recently sent to press, was withdrawn, and we exchanged the materials that each had prepared for the half which was to be executed by the other; but, to speak generally, Mr. Arnold is responsible for the first half, from A to K (inclusive), and for the letter U; Mr. Riddle, for the remainder. Mr. Arnold has to thank W. Frädersdorff, Esq., of the University of Berlin, for very useful assistance rendered to him during the progress of the work. Mr. Riddle has also some acknowledgements to make to the same gentleman; and is still more indebted to his own brother, the Rev. John B. Riddle, M.A., of Wadham College, Oxford.

PREFACE.

THE work, now at length completed, has cost us many years of labour, —labour that has often seemed almost hopeless.

A very slight inspection of it will show that it aims at a far higher standard of accuracy and completeness than any of its English predecessors. Indeed, it can hardly be said to have had any predecessor in its own kind; for no English-Latin Dictionary hitherto published has even professed to give any account of the use of the words set down, their synonymical distinctions, the niceties connected with their employment by classical writers, with such remarks and cautions as a cursory glance at any important word in the following work will prove that it has at least attempted to supply.

The title-page states that it is founded upon the German-Latin Dictionary of Dr. CHARLES ERNEST GEORGES, of which the first edition was published at Leipsic in 1833; the third, in 1845. That work consists of two octavo volumes, usually bound together in one very thick volume of 1820 pages. Dr. Georges had a predecessor of great merit in Dr. FREDERICK CHARLES KRAFT. As, however, the only edition of Kraft's Dictionary that we have consulted is the fourth edition ('remodelled and enlarged'), which appeared at Stuttgard in 1843, we cannot state exactly how far Dr. Georges is indebted to the earlier

We are very conscious that the work is still far from perfect ; but we feel a just confidence, founded upon the excellence of Georges' Dictionary, and a consciousness of our own diligence, that it possesses the general merit of strict accuracy, and is the only English-Latin Dictionary that a student can consult with the reasonable hope of finding what he wants, and the certainty of being able to trust what he finds.

POSTSCRIPT TO THE THIRD EDITION

It has been judged expedient to annex an Index of Proper Names to the Lexicon, instead of publishing one in a separate form. Such an Index has been appended by Professor Anthon to his American reprint of our work, and we have gladly availed ourselves of his labours in this edition of the Lexicon. It "has been prepared," as the Professor tells us, "from the best sources ; but more particularly from Quicherat's 'Vocabulaire des Noms Géographiques, Mythologiques et Historiques de la Langue Latine,' Mühlman's 'Verzeichniss der Geographischen, Mythologischen und Geschichtlichen Namen,' Freund's 'Wörterbuch der Lateinischen Sprache,' Klotz's 'Handwörterbuch der Lateinischen Sprache' (as far as published), Sharpe's 'Nomenclator Poeticus,' Leusden's 'Onomasticon,' &c., and Bischoff and Möller's 'Vergleichendes Wörterbuch der alten, mittleren, und neuen Geographie.'"

LIST OF ABBREVIATIONS.

qs = aliquis.
qd = aliquid.
cs = alicujus.
ci = alicui.
qm = aliquem.
qam = aliquam.
qo = aliquo.
qā = aliqua.

Np. = Nepos.

O. = Ovid.

Q. = Quintilian.

S. = Sallust.

T. = Tacitus.

V. = Virgil.

The names of other authors are abridged in the usual way,—Cæs., Ter., Plin., &c. When Plin. stands without "Ep." (= Epistles), the Natural History of the elder Pliny is meant.

Auct. Herenn. = the author of the 'Rhetorica ad Herennium,' amongst Cicero's Works.

Obd. Theod. } = Code of Roman laws drawn Cod. Just. } up by command of Theodosius and Justinian, respectively.

Inscriptt. = Inscriptions. Inscript. Orell. = Orelli's Collection of Latin Inscriptions.

JCt. = Juris Consulti (with reference to technical terms of Roman law).

* prefixed to a word or phrase means that it is not found in a Classical author, but is the best substitute the compilers can give. Very many phrases to which this note is prefixed are from Muretus, Ruhnken, Wyttienbach, &c. Kraft has been very industrious in collecting these.

The meaning of a phrase printed thus: See 'make way for,' is, See the phrase 'make way for,' under WAY.

The initial letter of the word at the head of an article represents that word. The 3rd sing. of a verb, or the plur. of a substantive, is represented thus (supposing the word to be 'DRIVE') d.'s.

ABA

A. Letter of the Alphabet, A. The letter A, A litera.—Short A, A brevis. Great A, A grandis (opp. minuta).—To end in the letter A, in A literam exire (Q.).—To learn one's A, B, C, (1) lit. alpha et beta discere (Juv.), literarum nomina et contextus discere (their names in order).—(2) fig. prima elementa discere. primis elementis* or litteris imbui.

A. *Indefinite article: untranslated: but if it is to be intimated that the word is not to be understood definitely, aliquis is used: e.g. 'in the definition of a thing,' in definitione alicujus rei (in definitione rei would mean: of the thing already mentioned, or going to be mentioned). 'A certain one, a particular individual, though it is not necessary, or perhaps possible, to name it, quidam; e.g. 'A peasant did this,' hoc fecit rusticus quidam. 'A' is also transl. by quidam, when a particular individual is referred to a class: e.g. 'in the house of a host named Camillus,' in hospitio ejusdem, nomine Camelli, domo. 'Fabius a Pelignian,' Fabius, Pelignus quidam. 'A Pinto,' to express a man like Plato, a man of Plato's genus, &c. is generally transl. by the plural: e.g. 'We speak of a Paulus, a Cato, a Gallus, a Gallus, Paulus, Catones, Gallus. 'Often = such a one, is qui; e.g. who would not be favorably disposed to a king who &c. quis non ei regi faveret, qui &c. (with subj.). 'Each, with numerals. 'A' omitted, and a distributive numeral used: 'a day,' 'a month,' &c. my singuli. singulis diebus, mensibus, &c. (but also quot diebus, mensibus, &c.): in singulas horas, in singulos dies (but also in horas, in dies).—There were two hunts a day for the five days, binæ venationes per dies quinq.;—'A man,' my omitted, and distributive num. used. 'Two acres a man were allotted to the common people,' bina jugera agri plebi dividebantur.—All to a man, ad unum omnes. 'A' before the participial subst. is to be transl. by sup.: 'to go a hunting,' venatum ire.*

ALL, omnis (every, all: pl. omnes, all, without exception: opp. nulli, pauci, aliquot, &c.).—cuncti (all collectively, considered as really united: opp. dispersi, sejuncti). Hence in the sing. it is used only with collective nouns: e. g. senatus cunctus).—universus, universal (all, as united in our conception: opp. singuli, unusquisque. It excludes exceptions like omnes, but with more reference to the whole, than to the separate units that compose it). || Omnis Italia, geographically: Italia cuncta, Ag.—all the inhabitants of Italy.—ALL is also expressed strongly by two negatives, nemo non, nullus non, nemo with quin.—e. g. all see it, nemo non videt: all did it, nemo est, quin fecerit. || All = each, quisque. quisque (each one, the predicate being asserted of each and all alike).—quisvis (any one, without selection, but one only).—unusquisque (each single one). Thus; in all places, quoque loco. I had rather suffer all manner of evils, quidvis malo pati. || When ALL stands with an adj. to denote a whole class, the Romans generally made each individual prominent by the use of the superlatives with quisque. All the best men, optimus quisque. || ALL = whoever, whatever, quicumque: a. who are engaged, will know, quicumque prelio interfuit, sciet.—Sis quod (with est or habeo) with the gen. A. the time I can spare fm my forensic labours, quod mihi de forensi labore temporis datur: I sent to the Prætors to bring you all the soldiers they had, ad Prætores misi, ut, militum quod haberent, ad vos deducerent. || ALL = any, after without (e. g. 'without all doubt'), ullus (for which the Comic writers and Ov. sts use omnis). If a negative precedes, aliquis or omnis. || All in all, or ALL used substantively, may be transl. in various ways: e. g. his son is a. in a. to him, filius ci unus omnia est; filium fert or gestat in oculis: he has lost all, eversus est fortunis omnibus. || At ALL: omnino, prorsus: after negatives, nihil (the negative being untransl.). Nearer at a., omnino nunquam: nothing at a., omnino nihil: nowhere at a., omnino nusquam: hardly, if at a., vix, aut omnino non: not much, if at a., non multum, aut nihil omnino. || At all times, omni tempore, semper. || With CAN, COULD. I can, quantum possum or (if relating to the future) potero. I would strive a. that ever I could, quantum maxime possem contenderem. A. that in me lies, or is in my power, quantum in me erit (relating to the future). He did a. he could to overthrow the state, remp., quantum in ipso fuit, everit: to labour a. I can, quantumcumque possum, laborare. || To BE ALL ONE. It is a. one to me, nihil mea interest or refert (it is a. one to Caius, nihil Cæii interest or refert). qd negligo, non or nihil curo; qd mihi non curæ est: it is a. one to him what people think of him, negligit, non or nihil curat, quid de se quisque sentiat. || For ALL (1) = although, Vid. (2) in spite of, adversus: he is a fool for a. his age and grey hairs, stultus est adversus ætatem et capitis canitatem. Sts by in with abl. (e. g. noscitantur tamen in tantā deformitate, for a. their pitiable appearance): for a. that, tamen; nihilo secius; nihilo minus. || Whilst—all the while (as used to point out the co-existence of two states, &c., that should not co-exist): quum interea or quum only: e. g. belulum subito exarsit, inquam Ligarius, domum spectans, nullo se negotio implicari passus est ('whilst L. all the while', &c.). || ALL ALONG, semper (always): continuer (uninterruptedly; incessantly). || ALL AND EACH, omnes ac singuli; singuli universique. || ALL, WITHOUT EXCEPTION, omnes ad unum, or (less commonly) ad unum omnes (here unum is newer, but now and then agrees with the subj.: us, naves onerariæ omnes ad unam sunt exceptæ, C. Lentul. in C. Ep

12, 14, 2). || NOT AT ALL (in answers), non.—minime vero. minime . . . quidem: also ino. imo vero. imo enim vero. Imo potius (with an assertion of the opposite of that which the question implies). Instead of non only, non with the verb of the question is only used: non ita est? not at all! non sum irata!—don't you believe this? an tu hæc non credis? not at all! minime vero!—num igitur peccamus? not at all! minime vos quidem!—sicine hunc decipis? not at all: it is he who is deceiving me, imo enim vero hic me decipit.—No; not so at a. I non ita est. It is not so—not at a. I non est ita!—non est profecto. || ALL THE BETTER, tanto melior! (a conversational form of approbation or encouragement). Plaut.—omnes scyphanthas instruxi et comparami, quo pacto ab lenone auferam hoc argumentum.—Tanto melior!—See Freund's Lex. Tanto. || ADDITIONAL PHRASES. a. or nothing, nihil nisi totum: a. and each, omnes singuli: a. without exception who, omnes quicumque: before a. things, omnium primum, ante omnia; also, imprimis: against a. expectation, præter opinionem. ex inopinato: a. on a sudden, improvviso. repente (Syn. in UNEXPECTEDLY): against a. chances, ad omnes casus: a. mankind, universum genus hominum; universitas generis humani: now you know it a., rem omnem habes; habes consilia mea (of a person's views): is that a.? tantumne est? *It is a. o'er, actum est (de . . .): to be a. in a. to aby, omnia esse ci: with a. one's might, omnibus viribus or nervis, &c. ALTERNATIVE. There is no word for it; but the notion may be expressed in various ways. 'Peace or war is our only alternative, inter bellum et pacem nihil medium est (C.). 'Either he must be punished by the state, or we enslaved: there is no other alternative, res in dii discrimin adducta est, utrum ille poenas reipublice luat, an nos servitium (C.). To offer abey an a, *grumam conditionem ei proponere.

ALTHOUGH, etsi (= 'even if', the concession made is here simply a supposition: if considered as really existing, the indic. is used; if merely as possible, the subjunctive).—etiam si (a fuller and stronger etsi = 'you even if', 'even if'). Etiam si etsi differ nearly as 'though' and 'although'.—tamen etsi or tametsi (gives prominence to the improbability of the co-existence of the supposition and the asserted consequence: it is often followed by tamen, which has the force of 'yet never the less').—quamquam (= 'however much' the supposition really exists: the real existence of the supposition being granted, it takes the indicative in the best writers).—quamvis ('however much you, the person addressed, may possibly imagine the concession to exist really: hence in Cic. only with the subj.).—~~quoniam~~ quoniam and quamvis can only be used with adjectives, adverbs, and verbs, whose notion can be supposed to exist in a heightened degree of intensity. licet (= 'granted the thing be so': 'let it be so, if you like': allowing a supposition, the correctness of which the speaker does not in any degree maintain himself, but allows the person addressed to maintain if he pleases: it is an impersonal verb, and takes the subj. governed by ut omitted. It may occur in other tenses: thus, detrahat auctori multum fortuna licebit: and C. has quamvis licet, N. D. 3, 36; Tusc. 4, 21). ~~ut~~ Though' correcting or limiting a previous statement, or adding to it some circumstance to be kept in view in the application of it, is quamquam, less frequently etsi; the conjunction standing at the head of a sentence, which is then more than a mere subordinate clause. Thus confer te ad Manlium: inter patris bellum. Quamquam quid ego te iuvitem, &c. (C.) Deo, do, poenas temeritatis meae: etsi quae fuit illa temeritas? (C.) Quum (with subj.), properly denotes the co-existence of two apparently inconsistent states, &c.—Ut has also the meaning of although (ut desint vires, tamen est laudanda voluntas. O.), and ne of 'although—not' (e. g. ne sit summum malum dolor, malum certe est. C.). A.—yet: sit ut—ita (ut quies certaminum erat, ita ab apparatu operum ac munitionum nihil cessatum. L.).

AND, et (= kai: joins words and notions, each of which is considered independently, and as of equal importance). — atque, ac (add what is of somewhat more importance: ac not before vowels or h: very seldom before g. C. Fam. 12, 7) — que (= rē: joins a word closely to another as an appendage to it). 'And' at the beginning of indignant questions is et (et quisquam dubitabit, &c. 1). || AND is often untranslated: 1) when it unites single notions of the following kind: a) in certain combinations of frequent occurrence: e. g. 'horse and man,' equi viri; 'men and women,' viri mulieres. So ventis remis, &c. b) Before the last term of an enumeration, when the preceding terms are not connected by 'and.' 'Our country was preserved by my labours, counsels, and dangers,' patria laboribus, consiliis, periculis meis servata est. 'There were present Greeks, Romans, and others,' aderant Græci, Romani, alii. 2) The particle 'and' is, however, inserted before the last term of an enumeration, it being omitted before the others, when that expresses the whole class, to which the preceding terms belong. c) Between the names of consults it is sometimes omitted. 2) When 'and' connects whole sentences. In English we often connect by 'and' sentences that relate to different times, or the latter of which is a consequence of the former, or describes a subsequent action of a person mentioned in the former. Such sentences are in Latin either, a) connected by the rel. qui: e. g. 'a messenger came and announced,' venit nuntius, qui nuntiabat: or, b) the subordinate sentence is turned into a participial clause: 'he came forward and spoke thus,' in medium prodians hæc locutus est: 'he left the city and retired to his country house,' urbe relicta in villam se recepit: or, c) causal particles are used, when statements stand to each other in the relation of cause and effect, occasion and consequent action, &c.: e. g. 'Xanthippus was sent to aid the Carthaginians, and defended himself bravely,' Xanthippus, quum Carthaginiensibus auxilio missus esset, fortiter se defendit. 'I saw him, and immediately recognized him,' postquam eum aspexi, illico cognovi. || AND so; AND ACCORDINGLY: itaque, ita que only (to intimate the rapid succession of the second overs). ¶ AND AS IT WERE, et quasi, or less only tanquam (neer atque (ac) quasi or tanquam, Stürenberg). ¶ AND ALSO, et—quoque (e. g. et sarmenta quoque in merce sunt).—nec non (to connect sentences; they should stand separately. They are not used in the best prose to connect two nouns like a simple etc.). If two adjectives or other attributions are spoken of one noun, 'and also' is translated by idemque, et idem (e. g. musicus idemque philosophus). ¶ AND YET, et tamen; atqui (at the beginning of a sentence). ¶ AND THAT, et is, iaque: if 'and that' relates to a verb or to a whole sentence, idque should be used (negotium magnum est navigare, idque mense Quintili). ¶ AND NOT, nec or neque; et nō; ac non: nec or neque when the negative refers to the whole of the second sentence: et non or ac non, when it belongs more particularly to a single word or notion in it, or when the 'and' is very emphatic. ac non only when the notion in the second clause corrects, or is opposed to, a notion in the first: e. g. 'we must use reason, and not follow the distorted rule of custom', adhibenda est ratio, nec utendum pravissima consuetudinis regulā: 'it would be tedious and is not necessary to relate', longum est et non necessarium commemorare. 'I would write to you at greater length, if the thing needed words, and did not speak for itself', pluribus verbis ad te scriberem, si res verba desideraret, ac non pro se ipsa loqueretur).—How in such a sentence as, 'it is a and not B, it would be quite wrong to express the 'and' in Latin: e. g. tuā culpā factum est, non meā (not tuā culpā factum est, et non meā). ¶ AND NOT RATHER, ac non or ac non potius. ¶ AND NOBODY, and NOTHING; and NEVER, &c. nec quisquam, nec quidquam, nec umquam, if the negative belongs to the whole sentence; et nemo, et nihil, et numquam, when the negative belongs to the single word. ¶ In sentences of parallel construction, e. g. 'A does this, and B does that', &c., the 'and' should be translated by autem, which is a weak adverbative particle: e. g. voluptates impellere, quo velit: unde aute m velit, deducere.—versutos eos appello, quorum mens celeriter versatur, callidos aute m, quorum mens—usu concalluit.

AS, I) As a particle of comparison: ac, atque (after word denoting equality, similarity, &c.: sequo, item, par, &c.): quum (if exact equality is not meant, but excess or defect. Thus if a negative precedes sequo, &c., quum must be used, not ac, atque, for the negative destroys the exact equality. Heron. Cas. B. G. 2, 6).—et, ut, and (after item ac, atque, et, qui, eid. cum (as in Sall. and Tac.). We cannot maintain friendship unless we love our friends as ourselves, amicitiam tueri non possumus, nisi sequo amicos et noemet ipsos diligamus: in what a situation our affairs are, you know as well as I do, quo in loco res nostræ sint, juxta modum omnes intelligitis: they go away the same men as they come, iidem abeunt, qui venerunt. After such, so great, so many (talis, tantus, tot), not quam but qualis, quantus, quot. He is such as he ever was, talis est, qualis semper fuit. I'm forms of protection and swearing: 'as true as,' ita or sic with the subj. followed by ut, with the subj. if a wish is to be expressed, the indic. if an assertion is to be made: 'as true as I live, I shudder,' &c., ita vivam (or ita deos mihi velim propitios), ut—perhorresco: or (with ita vivam thrown in parenthetically) perhorresco, ita vivam, &c. 'As true as I am alive, I should like,' &c., ita vivam (or ita mihi omnia, que opto, contingant) ut velim, &c. [As (so) WELL.—AS: et—et; tam—tam; quam—tum (with quum—tum, the clause with quum is the more general, that with tum the more special statement). Sic ut—sic; non minus—quam. [tam—quam in this sense does not belong to the Pline age.] NOT so.—AS, non tam—quam. The Romans waged some wars not so successfully as bravely, Romani bella quamdam non tam feliciter quam fortiter gesserunt (or Romani bella quamdam fortius quam feliciter, or magis fortiter quam feliciter gesserunt).—Cains is not so prudent as he is brave, Cains fortior est quam prudentior (which allows him some prudence: magis fortis est quam prudens or fortis est quam prudentior. The form fortior est quam prudentior is that which belongs to the best age). AS—so: ut—ita or sic: quemadmodum—eodem modo: quemadmodum—sic; velut—sic or ita. AS MUCH AGAIN, alterum tantum: this is as big again as that, hoc altero tanto majus est. AS MANY AS (= all who), quotumque: AS MUCH AS, quantumcumque. [AS SOON AS: simul et ac (atque). simul ut. also simul alone.—ut. ut primum. quum primum.—ubi (when).—postquam (after). All these take the perfect indic. in narrative where we should use the pluperf.; but when repeated actions or continued states are described, the principal verb being in the imperfect, the verb with postquam, &c. may be in the pluperf.—(stimulas se remiserat—reperiebatur. Np.) AS (= as if), AS IF: tamquam. I depart from life as from an inn, ex vita discedo, tamquam ex hospitio.

II) As a particle of explanation. [As if; just as if: tamquam; tamquam si; veluti; haud secus ac si; non aliter quam si (all with subj.): the men flocked together as if something of great importance were at hand, tamquam summi momenti res ageretur, ita conveniunt homines. Sic in abl. abs. is used: the enemy pursued as if the victory were already won, hostes insecuti, quasi partâ jam victoriâ. AS IF (ironically): as if forsooth I thought this, quasi vero id putem. To denote a property: tamquam (expressing equality in point of manner and degree: 'as much as,' 'as if'): ut (the relation, 'as far as'): loco (in the place of): instar (as good as, of equal value or weight with): nomine (under the name of). I love you as a friend, amo te ut amicum (so far as you are my friend): tamquam amicum (as much as a friend; as much as if you were my friend): to be as a son to aby, filii loco esse ei: to be to aby as a father, ei parentis numero esse. Sic other forms must be used: e. g. we must do as physicians do, medicorum ratio or consuetudo imitanda est. To carry off as so much gain, lucri nomine tollere qd. Plato is, in my judgement, as good as all of them together, Plato est mihi instar omnium.—As with a substantive is here often translated by an adv. or by in modum. To behave as a woman, muliebriter se gerere: to act as a slave, serviliter agere: to obey as slaves, in modum servorum parere: to torture a free citizen as a slave, civem servilium in modum cruciare. [AS; AS BEING. Here the property contains also the ground of the preceding statement, and quippe, quippe qui, utpote qui, are used. Quippe is often used with something of irony, and before participles or other attributives only [Democrito, quippe viro eruditio, &c.]: quippe or utpote qui mihi take subj. [Pract. Intr. II. 814.] They did not trust their own valour, as being men who had been often routed, non sua virtute confisi sunt, quippe toties fusi fugatique. [AS is often untranslated: e. g. with such verbs as to consider or look upon: a., with such must be looked upon as the greatest evil, hoc maximum malum existimandum est: he is looked upon as a very just man, justissimus vir habetur. [AS is also untranslated when—in the character of, or when I was. He dedicated, as dictator, the temple of Salus, which he had vowed when consul, eidem Salutis, quam consul voverat, dictator dedicavit. [AS FOR INSTANCE: ut; velut; veluti. Animals which are born on land, as for instance crocodiles, bestie quæ gignuntur in terrâ, veluti crocodili: even the gods waged wars, as for instance with the giants, di quoque bella gesserunt, ut cum gigantibus.—Sic vel is used in this sense: raras tuas quidem sed suaves accipio literas: vel (as for instance) quas proxime accepi, quam prudenter, &c. [Pract. Intr. II. 542.]

III) As a particle of time. [AS—when: quum. ut. ubi. [Ubi marks a point in time from which something began: ut, an event which was succeeded by another: quum, the coincidence of two facts, so that either both happen at the same point of time, or a momentaneous action introduced by 'as' either happens whilst another is still going on, or is immediately consequent to it. See EXCURS. II. to Grotendorf's Materials.]—Ut and ubi take the indic. (when no other reason requires the subj.) my the perf.—quum also takes indic. of pres. and perf. (and also with the imperf. and pluperf. of repeated actions—as often ac); but in simple narrative has the subj. of imperf. and pluperf.—Very often the verb with 'as' is trans. by a participle, which will be in abl. absol. when the two propositions have not the same subject. [AS OFTEN AS: quoties. quum with indic. even of imperf. and pluperf. [Quum quamplurimam cohortem ex orbe exceperat, hostes velocissime fugiebant. Cas.] AS LONG AS: tam diu—quam or quam diu: usque adeo—quoad.—as relax, quamdiu (e. g. tenuit se uno loco quamdiu fuit hiems).—quoad (all the time until; as long as). AS—whilst, dum, or by partec. of pres. [AS SOON AS. See AS, I.]

IV) As a causal particle—since; inasmuch as: quoniam (indic.).—quam (subj.): quando; quandoquidem (indic.).—See SINCE.

V) AS TO; AS CONCERNING; AS TOUCHING, &c.: quod attinet ad. quod; sic de ad. AS TO the book, which your son gave you, quod ad librum attinet, quem tibi filius dabat. AS TO retaining our liberty, I agree with you, de libertate retinenda tibi assentior. AS TO (or, as for) Pomponius, I would have you write, if you think good, quod ad Pomponianum, si tibi videtur, scribas velim. AS TO my Tullia, I agree with you, de Tullia meâ tibi assentior. AS to your praying that &c., (nam) quod precatus es, ut &c. [AS TO, before infim. after 'so,' 'such,' ut: after a neg. or interrog. sentence, ut, or more cum qui (with subj.). No man is so senseless as to believe this, nemo tam delirus est, ut (or qui) hæc credat. [quis potest tam avertisse a vero esse, qui neget, &c.]—AS NOT TO, nullus. No food is so hard as not to be digested, &c., nullus cibum tam gravis est, quin is—concoquatur.

VI) MISCELLANEOUS PHRASES WITH AS. Be it as it may, utrumque res est or erit.—AS WAS LIKELY; AS WAS SURE TO HAPPEN: id, quod necesse erat accidere.—AS PEOPLE SAY, ut dicunt, ferunt, or aiunt: ut dictum, traditum, or fertur. As you observed, &c., id quod dixisti, &c.: as all allow, id quod omnes consentunt, &c.—AS QUICKLY AS POSSIBLE, quam celerrime: AS SOON AS POSSIBLE, quam brevissime: AS FAR AS I CAN, quoad ejus facere possum: AS FAR AS POSSIBLE, AS FAR AS CAN BE DONE, quoad ejus feri potest. As it were (softening a strong word, &c.), quass. As far as appearance goes, ad speciem (e. g. forum adornatum ad speciem magnifico ornatu. C.). As far as I know, quod sciam. As far as I can with a good conscience, quod salva fide et salvo officio possum. But with quantum such limitations are in the indic. [quantum—intelligo.]

BUT, at. sed. verum or vero. autem (at has an adverbative, sed a corrective or limiting force: verum or vero affirms the truth or importance of an assertion; autem carries on a train of thought already begun: it is the weakest adverbative particle). — It is to be observed that autem and vero stand after one or more words, the rest at the beginning of the sentence. — BUT ON THE OTHER HAND, at (reply before personal names and pronouns): BUT AT LEAST, BUT AT ALL EVENTS, at, at certe or tamen. — BUT in objections anticipated (= but it may be said, or urged), at, at enim, at vero. — 'TRUE, BUT' (in concessions), at, at enim (the concession being followed by another consideration that must not be lost sight of). — BUT FORAOTH (in anticipating objections), at vero, at enim. — BUT (in the minor premises of a syllogism), atque. autem. — BUT BEHOLD OR LO! ecce autem! — NAY, BUT; NAY, BUT ASSUREDLY, enimvero, verum enimvero. — BUT (when a subject is to be ended or suspended), sed, its verum: b. enough for to-day, sed—in hunc diem hæcenus. — I DON'T SAY... BUT, non modo—sed; non dicam or non dico—sed; ne dicam or nedum. [Pract. Intr. II. 506–508]. — NOT ONLY NOT—BUT EVEN NOT, non modo—sed ne—quidem (when a verb, common to both clauses, is expressed in the second); non modo non—sed ne—quidem. Such a man will not dare, not only to do, but even to think any that is not honorable, talis vir non modo facere, sed ne cogitare quidem quidquam audebit, quod non honestum sit. — NOT THAT—BUT (rejecting one reason and affirming another), non quod—sed; non eo quod—sed; non quo—sed (the last being not only permissible, but of more frequent occurrence than the other forms). — NOT THAT—NOT, —BUT, non quia—sed; non quo

non—sed [Pr. Intr. II. 81].—|| BUT YET, BUT NOW-EVER, at, atamen, verum tamen.—|| PERHAPS—BUT YET, fortasse—verum tamen. With a love of glory too eager perhaps, but yet honorable, amore glorie, nimis arcti fortasse, verum tamen honesto (C.).—|| BUT IF, sin, sin autem, si vero: BUT IF NOT, si non, si minus, si aliter.—|| NOT ONLY—BUT ALSO, non modo—sed etiam or verum etiam; non solum—sed etiam [see Pract. Intr. II. 504, 505], sic sed et (even in Cicero : non tantum—sed etiam. In non tantum—sed or vero etiam, there is never a descent fm the greater to the less; and this form cannot be used when neither the subject nor the predicate is common to both sentences.)—BUT ON THE CONTRARY, at contra, at enim vero.—BUT RATHER, imo, imo vero, imo enimvero.—|| To be praised with a but, cum exceptione laudari. Without an if, or but, sine ulla mora, haud cunctanter, libentissime.—|| But is sometimes not expressed in Latin, e. g.
this is thy office, but not mine, hoc tuum est, non meum.

BUT, in the sense of EXCEPT, præter; præterquam; excepto (—i, -is); nisi. *I saw nobody b. him, præter illum vidi neminem. No one is wise b. the good man, nemo sapiens est, nisi bonus. Nothing b., nihil aliud, nisi (that and nothing else); nihil aliud quam (i. e. equivalent to that). This happens to none b. a wise man, soli hoc contingit sapienti. I saw no one b. you, te unum vidi. Nothing could bring them into one united people b. law, coalescere in populi unius corpus, nulla re præterquam legibus, poterant. The last b. one, proximus a postremo. There is nobody here b. I, solus hic sum. What b.? quid aliud nisi or quam?
All b., tantum quod.*

BUT, in the sense of ONLY, modo, tantum, solum (tantum properly confines what was said to a certain magnitude, modo to a certain measure or degree, solum to the thing itself, to the exclusion of others).
tantummodo, nonnisi, solus, unus. *I saw b. you, te unum vidi. I did b. hear these things, not see them, hæc audivi tantum, non vidi. I will speak, do you b. hear, loquar, modo aud. If b., dummodo; dum (with subj.). Do b. let him, sine modo. Do b. stay, mane modo. B. too often, sapiens iustus; nimium sæpe.
There were b. two ways (two in all), erant omnino itineræ duæ. You have b. the name of virtue in your mouth, nomen tantum virtutis usurpas. He came b. to-day, hodie primum venit. B. a while ago, non ita pridem, nuper admodum. He is b. twenty years old, non amplius viginti annos natus est. I wanted b.
little that &c., tantum non, &c.; non multum absuit, quin &c.*

BUT THAT (except that if not), ni, nisi; quod nisi.
B. that I fear my father, ni metuum patrem. And b.
that he was ashamed to confess, et nisi erubesceret fateri.—|| After a negative, quin, qui non; in this use
we often drop that.—|| Quin is hardly ever used where, if the rel. and non were used, cuius non or cui non would stand: it is the words for quo non after an expression of time. The sentence after quin must not contain another relative.—|| No day almost, b. (that) he comes to my house, dies fere nullus est, quin domum meam veniat, or quo domum meam non veniat. There is none b. is afraid of you, nemo est, qui te non metuat. There is none b. may complain, nemo est, quin conqueri possit. There is no doubt b. (that) &c., non est dubium, quin (with subj.). I have no fear b. I shall write you letters enough, non vereor, ne non scribendo te expleam. None b. (i. e. those who did not), nemo quin, nemo qui non.—|| None b. knows, nemo
est, qui nesciat.—|| Not b. that, non quin, non quia non, with a subj., followed in the subsequent clause by sed quod or sed quia with the indic., or by sed ut with the subj.

BUT, after cannot. I cannot b. &c., facere non possum quin (subj.), or non possum non (with inf.).—
non possum quin is Præ-class.—|| I cannot b. be &c., fieri non potest, ut non or quin &c.

BUT VRO (i. e. were it not for, had it not been for) some person or thing, nisi or ni qd or qd esset, fulset (absque qd or qd re esset is used by comic writers).—
The bridge would have afforded a way to the enemy b.
for one man, Horatius Cocles, pons iter hostibus dedit, ni unus vir fulset, H. C. (only in comedy should we And absque uno viro, Horatio Coclite, esset.) I would,
b. for hurting him, vellem, ni foret ei damnum.

gentia.—gravior (habit of acting carefully after due deliberation). The thing demands much c., res multas cautiones habet; res est multae diligentiae. With c., see CIRCUMSPECTLY.

CIRCUMSPECTLY, omnia circumspicienti (peri-cula, C.).—considerate. cogitate (not cogitato. Stüren-burg ad Cic. Arch. 8, 18). caute. circumspexite (Gell.).
—diligenter. attente.—circumspexio judicio.

CIRCUMSTANCE, res (the most general word); causa (the state, posture, situation, of a thing).—Jm.
res et causa.—tempus, exply the pl. tempora (posture of things brought on by the c.'s of the time); ratio (a reason founded in c.'s; hence the c. itself); momentum (the decisive c.); conditio (condition, limitation); mora (delay); ambages (c. of words). Trifling c.'s, parvae res. parva momenta.—The Latins, however, do not usually employ a distinctive substantive, but prefer some general, indifferent expression to convey this notion: as, this c. moved me, hoc me movit, or hac me motus sum.
—On this c. rests the whole business, in eo tota res vertitur (in eo cardo rei vertitur, not to be recommended). According to c.'s, pro re; pro re natā; ex or pro tempore; pro tempore et pro re (Caes. B. G.
5, 8). The c.'s of the times, tempora, ratio temporis or temporum; temporum vincula (C. Fam. 10, 6, 2). To act according to c.'s, ex re consulere. Under these or such c.'s, his rebus; quum cum sit sint or essent (things being so); in hoc or in tali tempore (in such an exis-tency: under such untoward c.'s). In this meaning the preposition 'in' is my expression. Under present c.'s, in praesentia (opp. in posterum). To suit one's self to c.'s, tempori servire (cast one's coat according to the cloth); necessitati parare (make a virtue of necessity).
To be in good c.'s, in rebus secundis esse; in bonā conditione constitutum esse. To be in straitened c.'s, parce ac duriter vitam agere. In his embarrassed, or desperate c.'s, in extremis rebus suis. My c.'s are none of the best, res sunt mihi minus secundae. To be placed in the same c.'s, in eadem causā or eodem loco esse; eadem est mea causa. I am grievously dissatisfied with my own c.'s, vehementer me poenitet status mei. A man is always dissatisfied with his own c.'s, sum quemque fortunae maxime poenitet (C.). Suppose yourself in my c.'s, eum te esse fingo, qui sum ego (C.).—Circumstances = (state of affairs), rerum status: a great change of c.'s has taken place, magna facta est rerum commutatio; vera sunt omnia: the untoward c.'s of the time or of affairs, iniquitas rerum.

COMEDIAN, artifex scenicus (g. t.). κωμικός comœdus, the singer of the canticum (recitativo, monologue) in comedy, opp. tragœdus (in tragedy). actor comicus, or comicus only (κωμικός, κωμικός). They all designate the actor in general who appears in comedy, not the person who acts the low comic parts, who, aft. Petron. 30, 9. can only be called qui par ex risu natus agit: all the actors in a comedy, excalet! (opp. cothurnati, tragediani, Srs. Ep. 87). See also ACTOR.—|| Writer of comedy, *poeta scenicus (g. t.): poeta comicus, or comicus only, εμψύχοι, pl. i. like a c., *scenicorum more. comico more. scenicus (g. t., e. g. complodere manus et pectus ferire scenicum est).—|| Comic a c. tress, artifex scenicus, or scenicus only (in later times).

COMEDY, comœdia.—fabula Atellana (sort of farce amongst the Romans): relating or belonging to c., comicus (κωμικός, opp. tragicus): in a manner belonging to c., comice. Comic character (i. e. in comedy), partes ridendæ. See also PLAY. To act a c., see to ACT.

Upon my c., I don't know, ne vivam, si scio: for upon my c., I did think so, nam, ita vivam, putavi (hoc, illud): I ask you on your c., aude you a wife? ex tui animi sententia tu uxorem habes? (see C. de Or. 2, 64, extr.). Cases of c., vid. under CASE (end). —CONSCIENTIOSUS, vld.

CONSCIENTIOUS, religiosus; sanctus; severus; justus (SYN. IN CONSCIENTIOUSNESS). To be c. in a thing, religionem adhibere: to deviate fm the c. performance of a duty, a religione officii declinare: in the most c. manner, optima fide (e. g. to pay abg, ci qd annuuntur); sanctissime (e. g. tueri religiones publicas).

CONSCIENTIOUSLY, religiose; sancte; severe. —diligenter (exactly, punctually).

¹ The phrase 'to make a conscience,' appears to be used with some difference of meaning; thus, 'we must make a c. in keeping the just laws of superiors' (Jer. Taylor) = 'we must observe them religiously.' But L'Estrange uses: 'to make a c. of betraying for gold,' in the sense of not betraying for gold from a conscientious principle of duty. Locke says, 'we must make c. not to mislead children.' Hence we must consider whether the meaning of 'making a c.' is the making it a point of c. to do the thing in question, or not to do it.

CONSCIENTIOUSNESS, religio (c. towards the gods and all wch concerns them, e. g. c. of a judge who acts faithfully to his oath, &c.) —scintilla (severe integrity, as quality of one who, respecting the laws of God and man, shrinks fm avarice, rapacity, oppression, &c.). severitas (strict c., as quality of him who practices justice and right without partiality). —justitia (love of justice and equity). —fides (faith and honesty, in general, towards those with whom we deal); Jn. religio ac fides. —diligentia (exactness, punctuality, in general): c. in giving advice, religio in consilio dando.

CONSCIOUS. To be c., conscius sibi esse ea rei, or with Accus. and Infin.: not to be c. of any guilt, not to be c. of a thing, nullius sibi culpae conscius esse; nihil conscire sibi (H. Ep. 1, 1, 61): I am perfectly c. of it, bene memini. I am c. how, that &c., scio (if it is a matter of knowledge); sentio (if it is a felt conviction, e. g. si quid est in me ingenti, quod se tunc quam alit exigit, C.). I am not c. that I was ever, &c., conscius mihi sum, nunquam me fuisse, &c. (C.).

CONSCIOUSLY, sciens, prudens. Jn. sciens ac prudens.

CONSCIOUSNESS, conscientia (also, in a more limited sense of the word = the c. of having acted rightly). —sensus (feeling). The c. of having acted rightly, conscientia recte factorum: the c. of having lived a holy life and done much good, is a pleasant feeling, conscientia bene actae vitae multorumque benefactorum recordatio jucundissima est: I have the c. of having acted rightly, mihi conscius sum, recte me fecisse.

CONSCRIPT, conscriptus. —novus miles. —tiro miles, tiro (a newly levied soldier, opp. vetus miles, veteranus). The c.s., milites thrones; milites in supplementum lecti; also supplementum (as supplementary troops): to supply the army by c.s., supplere; explere supplemento; delectibus supplere; supplementum scribere ci.

CONSCRIPTION, delectus (of soldiers). —conquisitio militum (stronger term). A strict c. is ordered, *acer delectus denunciatur: delectus acerbitas (L.). To raise 30,000 troops by the c. rigidly enforced, intentissima requisitione ad triginta milia pedum conscire.

CONSECRATE, I To make holy by ceremonies, dedicare, inaugurare (to c.; inaug. also in speaking of a person, e. g. of a priest). ² dedicare is only used of things wch relate immediately to the cultus of the gods, as statues, images, altars, temples, &c.: if it was performed by the augurium, it was termed inaugurare). —consecrare (to make holy or sacred, of a thing, even of fields and animals; the consecratio might be performed by abg, the ded. only by a magistrate, to whom the pontifex, in that case, repeated or dictated the customary forms of words). —cultus divino sacre (to c. for purposes of worship, Amman.). To c. an altar, altar dedicare, consecrare: to c. a temple to a god, deum delubrum dedicare or templum consecrare: to c. abg (as a god), qm deum consecrare. Consecrated, sacratus; consecratus; sacer (holy, as the quality of the gods); religiosus (sacred). —τῷ. to dedicate, dedicare. dicare. —offerre (to offer). —diis primitias offerre. To c. one's life to the service of one's country, vitam suam totam patriae dedere.

CONSECRATION, consecratio, dedicatio [SYN. IN CONSECRATE]. C. also = apotheosis (T. Ann. 13, 2, extr. Suet. Dom. 2): the c. of a priest, consecratio (Inscr. Grut. 303, 2, see TO CONSECRATE). ³ inauguratio is without any classical authority. To receive c., consecrari: the feast of the c. of a thing, *dies rei inaugurandae or consecrandae sacer.

CONSECUTIVE, continens, continuus (following immediately one after the other without interruption) —contextus (hanging one on the other, not interrupted). —ordine (according to order, in turn). —alter post alterum. alius post alium (one after the other, the former in speaking of two; the latter of several persons). During three c. days, triduum continuum; tres dies continui: what have you been doing for so many c. days? quid tot continui dies egisti?

CONSECUTIVELY, continenter (in one succession, in one continuance, continue and continuo, see Class.). —deinceps (successively, one after another).

CONSENT, consensio, consensus. assensus —Sto voluntas (the will): permissio (permission, e. g. that abg may remain where he is, mansions, C. ad Qu. Fr. 3, 1, 3). —venia (indulgence in a thing, &c.). —auctoritas. Jussus (e. of any superior, the former in Rome of the senate, the latter of the people). With your c., to consentiente, probante: with the c. of the people, secundo populo: without your c., to adversante, renuente, nolente; injussu tuo: with the full c. of Catalus, summā Catuli voluntate: with aby's c., cā permisso (i. e. a permission): cā voluntate (with his good will, e. g. to do athg, facere qd): without aby's c., injussu cā (prop. without any order): with the c. of all, consensu omnium (i. e. with the concurrence of all in one opinion): they gave their unanimous c. that hē, assensu omnes permiserunt, ut &c.

CONSENTANEOUS, consentaneus, convenientis or congruens (all three with ci rei). See also CONFORMABLE.

CONSENTANEOUSLY, see CONFORMABLY.
